WVC Named One of Nonprofit Times'
50 Top Nonprofits to Work For in 2018

LAS VEGAS, NEVADA (April 11, 2018) – WVC is pleased to announce that they have been named one of Nonprofit Times' 50 Best Nonprofits to Work For in 2018. The report asked employees culture questions in eight key business and operational categories regarding leadership and planning; corporate culture and communications; pay and benefits; training, development and resources; and more. More than 70 percent of the 59-person WVC staff completed the voluntary survey. Their participation resulted in the organization being ranked 23 on this prestigious list of nonprofits. Awarded organizations scored 90 percent or better in the rated categories which included; professional development, training, communication and confidence in leadership.

“WVC is on this list because of our incredibly dedicated, responsible and passionate WVC team,” said David Little, WVC chief executive officer. “It is because of each of them that WVC is able to provide the veterinary community with the highest quality continuing education and world-class facilities, which support their personal and professional growth. We are honored to have received this recognition. It is confirmation we are on the right track as an organization.”

WVC produces the WVC Annual Conference each spring and offers numerous year-round educational programs at the state-of-the-art Oquendo Center in Las Vegas. For 2018, WVC will host a Veterinary Technician Symposium, Women's Veterinary Summit, Recent Graduate Symposium and Veterinary Business Leadership Symposium. The Association will also host Destination CE in Costa Rica, in addition to 'On the Road' courses, which will be held in various cities across the U.S.
